Quilters begin by finding coordinating donated fabrics that fit their pattern

A pile of children's quilts ready to deliver to the Regina General Hospital

Volunteers, like JoAnn Harrison (L) and Myrna Pitzel Bazylewski (R) gather every Thursday in Regina to sew quilts for charitable organizations

Sewing machines hum every Thursday at the Neil Balkwill Centre in Regina, where a group of up to 45 women gather to make quilts for charity. It's a kind and generous calling for these volunteers who belong to the Prairie Piecemakers Quilters' Guild, and the group has been selected to receive one of SaskEnergy's 2016 Share the Warmth Grants.
